1 I, YLIANA JOHANSEN-MENDEZ, HEREBY DECLARE AS FOLLOWS:

2 1. I make this declaration based on personal knowledge and a review of 3 records related to my position as Legal Services Director at Immigration Defenders 4 Law Center.

5 2. I am the Legal Services Director at Immigrant Defenders Law Center 6 (“ImmDef”) in Los Angeles, California. As Legal Services Director, I oversee the 7 Children’s Representation Project (“CRP”), which includes our Detained Youth 8 Empowerment Project (“DYEP”), to ensure that the organization achieves its overall 9 mission to protect the rights of immigrants in removal proceedings.

10 3. I have personal knowledge of the facts set forth herein, except as to those 11 stated on information and belief, and as to those, I believe them to be true. If called 12 as a witness, I could and would testify competently to the following.

13 4. I have been an attorney admitted to the State Bar of California since 14 December 2011. I received my B.A. from Occidental College in 2006 and J.D. from 15 Boston College Law School in 2011.

16 5. I first started working with immigrant youth who had been designated as 17 “unaccompanied children” in 2010 while I was in law school. Thereafter, I was an 18 Equal Justice Works Fellow at Kids in Need of Defense, in Los Angeles, CA from 19 September 2011 to August 2013. I provided direct representation and removal 20 defense exclusively to unaccompanied children in removal proceedings before the 21 Los Angeles Immigration Court.

22 6. When my Equal Justice Works Fellowship ended, I was accepted to the 23 U.S. Department of Justice Honors Program. From September 2013 to August 2015, 24 I worked for the Executive Office of Immigration Review (“EOIR”). I was an 25 Attorney Advisor and functioned as a judicial law clerk to the judges of the Las Vegas 26 Immigration Court.

27 7. Immediately prior to working at ImmDef, from August 2015 to February 28 2018, I worked for the Department of Homeland Security’s (“DHS”) United States

CASE NO. 2:21-cv-00395-FMO-RAO

1 Citizenship and Immigration Services (“USCIS”) at the Los Angeles Asylum Office.
2 I was hired as an Asylum Officer and was later promoted to Senior Asylum Officer.

3       8. I joined Immigrant Defenders Law Center in February 2018 as a 4 Managing Attorney in the CRP and was promoted to Legal Services Director in May 5 2019. In this role, I oversee ImmDef’s largest projects, the CRP and the DYEP. My 6 responsibilities include leading the CRP team in representing unaccompanied 7 children in their removal proceedings and the DYEP team in providing know-your-8 rights presentations and legal screenings to detained unaccompanied children. I also 9 work collaboratively with the Executive Director, Litigation and Advocacy Director, 10 and the Legal Services Director for Universal Representation Programs to develop 11 the organization’s strategic direction and facilitate the integration of ImmDef’s 12 strategic framework into the legal departments’ work. Lastly, I engage with key 13 stakeholders, including government agencies, contractors, grantors, donors, 14 community partners, and allies to further ImmDef’s mission.

15 I. ImmDef Represents Unaccompanied Children in Removal Proceedings

16       9. ImmDef’s mission is to achieve universal representation for immigrants 17 in removal proceedings. We pursue our mission by providing pro bono services and 18 advocacy to Southern California’s most marginalized immigrant and refugee 19 communities through legal services, community empowerment, strategic litigation, 20 and direct representation of clients before the asylum office, immigration court, the 21 Boards of Immigration Appeals, and the Ninth Circuit. ImmDef is a social justice 22 law firm that defends immigrant communities against injustices in the legal system.

23       10. ImmDef has offices in Downtown Los Angeles, Santa Ana, Riverside, 24 and San Diego. ImmDef currently employs a staff of 116 people across four Southern 25 California offices, providing pro bono representation to adults, children, and families 26 facing deportation. ImmDef represented more than 1,600 noncitizens in removal 27 proceedings and provided education and outreach services to about 1,100 28 noncitizens, the vast majority of whom were not clients, in 2019.

1       11. Our CRP team is the largest of our direct representation programs and 2 includes eight directing and managing attorneys, twenty-two staff attorneys, and 3 twenty paralegals, legal assistants, and other support staff. Additionally, we have a 4 ten-person non-attorney DYEP team that provides legal services for twelve Office of 5 Refugee Resettlement (“ORR”) unaccompanied children’s shelters and foster care 6 programs in the Los Angeles region and surrounding counties. In response to an 7 anticipated increase of unaccompanied children and the opening of new ORR-8 contracted shelters in our geographic service area in the coming year, ImmDef has 9 secured additional funding to hire one new managing attorney, one additional DYEP 10 coordinator, and two additional DYEP associates.

11       12. Additionally, in April 2021, ImmDef began to provide legal services to 12 the ORR Emergency Intake Site (“EIS”) located at Long Beach Convention Center
13 and Pomona Fairplex. ImmDef is aiming to provide Know Your Rights presentations 14 to all children in the EIS facilities, limited-scope legal screenings for as many 15 children as possible, full-scope representation when necessary to avoid harm or 16 prejudice to the child, and advocacy for children experiencing extreme emotional 17 distress, in need of medical attention, or who otherwise would benefit from their 18 immediate transfer to a standard ORR facility that is better equipped to meet their 19 needs. Combined, these EIS facilities are expected to house as many as 3,500 20 children at any given time. As of May 6, 2021, ImmDef has hired or contracted an 21 additional four staff members, and upon finalization of the contract terms anticipates 22 hiring several more attorneys and program associates to provide legal services at 23 these sites. In the meantime, ImmDef is detailing the existing members of its staff to 24 the EIS facilities in order to provide Know Your Rights (“KYR”) presentations and 25 legal screenings to the children in these facilities. As of May 6, 2021, ImmDef staff 26 has conducted KYR presentations to 518 individual children and legal screenings for 27 156 individual children at the Long Beach EIS, and KYR presentations to 113 28 individual children and legal screenings for at least fifty-seven individual children at

1 the Pomona EIS.

2 13. CRP is one of the largest programs of its kind in the United States. It 3 currently provides representation for close to 1,000 unaccompanied children, 4 including detained unaccompanied children in shelters or federal long-term-foster 5 care, as well as all unaccompanied children who have been released to sponsors 6 within the jurisdiction of the Los Angeles Immigration Court and some children in 7 the jurisdiction of the San Diego Immigration Court. CRP is contracted by the Vera 8 Institute of Justice to do so as part of the TVPRA's guarantee that unaccompanied 9 children must be granted access to counsel "to the greatest extent practicable." 8 10 U.S.C. § 1232(c)(5). These contracts obligate us to provide legal services to all 11 unaccompanied children in local ORR custody, and to provide removal defense 12 representation to all children in local long-term foster care programs, those seeking 13 voluntary departure while in ORR custody, as well as those children released from 14 local shelters and reunified with family or friends within our geographic service area.
15 ImmDef exceeds its contractual obligations by also offering removal defense 16 representation to children who fall into one of the following categories: 1) children 17 at risk of "aging out" of minority and at risk of transfer to ICE custody upon turning 18 eighteen years old; 2) children in temporary ORR facilities who are particularly 19 vulnerable for reasons such as mental health issues; and 3) children subjected to the 20 Trump Administration's zero tolerance policy. We have extremely limited additional 21 funding to represent other non-detained children.

22 14. The vast majority of our clients are released from ORR custody to reside 23 with a sponsor in the greater Los Angeles area, including Los Angeles, Orange, 24 Riverside, San Bernardino, Ventura, Santa Barbara, and Kern Counties. ImmDef
25 also represents all unaccompanied children who remain in ORR custody in long-term 26 foster care placements and a subset of unaccompanied children who are in short-term 27 ORR custody. On rare occasions, ImmDef continues to represent clients after their 28 transfer to other states and service areas. ImmDef cannot represent all children who 1 pass through its service area due to funding limits.

2 15. Every year CRP provides up to 1,200 locally detained and released
3 unaccompanied children with various social and legal services including KYR 4 presentations, legal screenings and consultations, case management support, legal 5 and community referrals, court preparation, “Friend of the Court” appearances for 6 unrepresented minors on the Los Angeles Immigration Court juvenile detained 7 docket, and full-scope legal representation. In 2020, ImmDef served 1,112
8 unaccompanied minors in total. This number is expected to be exponentially higher 9 in 2021 due to the opening of the EIS facilities in Long Beach and Pomona.

10 16. CRP aims to provide holistic representation to unaccompanied children 11 in removal proceedings in accordance with these clients’ stated interests. Consistent 12 with the TVPRA’s requirement that unaccompanied children receive legal services 13 to the extent practicable, we zealously advocate to ensure our unaccompanied child 14 clients receive the protections of the TVPRA, Flores Settlement Agreement, and 15 other benefits. We assist our clients to pursue all forms of relief for which our clients 16 may be eligible, including asylum, special immigrant juvenile status (“SIJS”), U 17 visas, T visas, and family-based petitions. ImmDef advocates for the release and 18 reunification of detained children through informal advocacy with stakeholders such 19 as child advocates, ORR case managers, Field Office Juvenile Coordinators 20 (“FOJCs”), and Health and Human Services Federal Field Specialists (“FFSs”), and 21 through formal legal avenues including habeas petitions and bond motions.
22 ImmDef’s representation therefore encompasses advocacy before USCIS, EOIR, 23 BIA, state court, federal district courts, federal appeals courts, and through informal 24 channels. The vast majority of ImmDef’s unaccompanied child clients are in INA 25 section 240 removal proceedings.

1       II. ImmDef's Initial Identification of Unaccompanied Children Has Been 2            Impacted by MPP

3        17. The Migrant Protection Protocols (“MPP”) was launched in January 4            2019. Pursuant to DHS’ announcement stating unaccompanied children would be 5            exempt from MPP, we did not anticipate or plan for unaccompanied children to be 6            subjected to MPP. By the summer of 2019, however, we began to witness and 7            understand the impact of the MPP program on unaccompanied children. Generally, 8            children who presented initially at the border as unaccompanied children were not 9            being placed in the MPP program and instead were being processed pursuant to the 10           TVPRA. Thus, they were placed in ORR custody after their apprehension and issued 11           a Notice to Appear (“NTA”)—the legal document that initiates removal proceedings 12           under INA section 240, which the TVPRA requires before an unaccompanied child 13           can be removed. By September 2019, our program began to identify several children 14           in ORR custody who had previously been placed in MPP proceedings with their 15           parents, but later entered unaccompanied (hereinafter “MPP-unaccompanied 16           children”). Although it is possible that our DYEP team had conducted legal 17           screenings for MPP-unaccompanied children without realizing they had previously 18           been in MPP, according to our case management records, by September 2019 we had 19           identified five MPP-unaccompanied children. In October 2019, that number 20           increased by an additional seventeen MPP-unaccompanied children. By the end of 21           February 2020, ImmDef had served at least fifty-six MPP-unaccompanied children.

22        18. In March 2020, in response to the COVID-19 pandemic, DHS 23           announced that the border would be closed pursuant to Title 42. Anyone apprehended 24           at the southern border would be summarily expelled from the United States, without 25           any opportunity to seek asylum or to be placed in normal immigration proceedings.
26           Consequently, there was a significant decrease in the placement of unaccompanied 27           children in ORR custody and our team only identified two MPP-unaccompanied 28           children that month. It was not until October 2020, after a court had entered a

1 preliminary injunction preventing the government from expelling children under 2 Title 42, that we again saw children in the local ORR shelters who had been in MPP 3 proceedings. We also have begun to identify MPP-unaccompanied children in the 4 EIS facilities. As of May 6, 2021, ImmDef is providing ongoing full-scale 5 representation services to thirty-two identified MPP-unaccompanied children.

6 III. MPP-Unaccompanied Children Are Treated Differently from Other 7 Unaccompanied Children with Prior Removal Orders

8 19. Our experience thus far with MPP-unaccompanied children is that they 9 are treated differently at every stage of the process than other unaccompanied 10 children with recent entries and prior removal orders not from MPP proceedings.
11 This, coupled with the DHS's inconsistent treatment of MPP-unaccompanied minors, 12 has created huge hurdles in representing MPP-unaccompanied minors and securing 13 their rights under the TVPRA.

14 20. Failure to Issue NTAs. Before MPP was implemented, ImmDef had 15 represented unaccompanied children with prior removal orders but these children 16 were not placed in reinstatement proceedings. Instead, they were placed in new 17 Section 240 proceedings pursuant to the TVPRA. In our observation, any of these 18 children who subsequently re-entered the U.S. as unaccompanied children were 19 issued a new Form I-862 NTA. DHS made no distinction between unaccompanied 20 children who were entering the U.S. for the first time and unaccompanied children 21 who had a prior immigration history, including prior removal orders. For both 22 unaccompanied children who had entered the U.S. for the first time as well as 23 unaccompanied children with prior removal orders, DHS might file an NTA 24 reflecting the child's most recent entry with EOIR. In other cases, DHS never filed 25 the NTA even though it issued and served the NTA upon the unaccompanied child.
26 DHS's failure to file an NTA for an unaccompanied child is not uncommon. Some 27 unaccompanied child clients we have represented never had their NTA's filed, and 28 others had their NTA's filed several years after their entry and the issuance of that

1 NTA. Regardless, unaccompanied children with removal orders from a prior entry
2 were never at risk of removal based on prior proceedings because the TVPRA 3 requires unaccompanied children be placed in section 240 removal proceedings. 8 4 U.S.C. § 1232(a)(5)(D). Placement in 240 removal proceedings through the issuance 5 of a new NTA that reflects the child's most recent entry and unaccompanied child 6 designation prohibits DHS from placing the child in expedited removal proceedings 7 or reinstating a prior removal order, thus protecting the child from removal based on 8 a prior order.

9 21. By contrast, DHS has been inconsistent regarding its policy of issuing 10 new NTAs reflecting unaccompanied children's most recent entries into the United 11 States as unaccompanied minors for children who were previously in MPP. In the 12 majority of ImmDef's cases in which unaccompanied children have prior MPP 13 removal orders, DHS has refused to issue a new NTA reflecting their most recent 14 date, manner, and location of entry to the U.S. as UC even when requested by 15 ImmDef attorneys. If ImmDef successfully severs a child's case from a parent's MPP 16 proceedings and changes venue to the Los Angeles Immigration Court, the removal 17 proceedings usually continue before the court based on the NTA issued while in 18 MPP. However, in at least one case where an MPP-unaccompanied child was 19 removed in absentia, DHS did issue a new NTA reflecting the child's most recent 20 entry as an unaccompanied minor while our Motion to Reopen was pending before 21 an MPP judge. Ultimately, this new NTA was never filed with EOIR because the 22 case was subsequently reopened and proceedings continued based on the original 23 NTA from MPP. Even if the child has their case severed from their parents' case, 24 forcing the child to proceed under the MPP-NTA prohibits the unaccompanied child 25 from accessing TVPRA protections, such as the right to seek voluntary departure, 26 because that NTA does not reflect their most recent entry without inspection as an 27 unaccompanied child.

28 22. Extra Motion Practice and Delayed Release to Sponsors. Unlike their

1 treatment of unaccompanied minors with removal orders, DHS Field Office Juvenile 2 Coordinators (FOJCs) have indicated that ICE intends to execute MPP removal 3 orders of MPP-unaccompanied children in ORR custody unless a Motion to Reopen 4 or a Notice of Appeal is filed. To avoid the immediate removal of an MPP-5 unaccompanied child in ORR custody, ImmDef staff have had to draft and file these 6 motions and appeals within extremely short timeframes. Also, in several cases it 7 became clear that ORR delayed release of MPP-unaccompanied children to family 8 members or sponsors due to the FOJC's indication that they would enforce the 9 unaccompanied child's prior MPP removal order if no motions or appeals were filed.

10 23. In contrast, I am not aware of any instances in which DHS has interfered 11 with the release of an unaccompanied child with recent entry and a prior removal 12 order or repatriation or has demanded that the legal service provider (LSP) serving 13 the child's ORR shelter file a Motion to Reopen or Notice of Appeal of a prior 14 removal to avoid the unaccompanied child's immediate removal. Rather, children 15 were released to sponsors and could then seek asylum at USCIS pursuant to the 16 TVPRA or apply for SIJS.

17 24. Failure to Change Venue and Address. ImmDef serves some 18 unaccompanied children who were detained in ORR facilities in other states or in the 19 jurisdiction of other immigration courts, and who are later transferred to ORR shelters 20 or foster care in our service area. When ORR transfers children from one facility to 21 another, they provide a "Notice of Transfer to ICE Chief Counsel – Change of 22 Address/Change of Venue" to DHS. Additionally, for those children with removal 23 proceedings that have already been initiated, DHS initiates the change of address and 24 change of venue of their proceedings to the receiving court jurisdiction by filing Form 25 I-830, Notice to EOIR: Alien Address. Thus, for purposes of updating the 26 unaccompanied child's address with the court and changing venue, DHS's practices 27 require it to take responsibility for ensuring that EOIR is updated regarding the 28 unaccompanied child's detention status and address.

1       25. I have not observed DHS follow these practices for MPP-
2 unaccompanied children. Instead, these children's MPP proceedings seem untouched 3 by their subsequent entry and placement in ORR custody. We have found that their 4 hearings are generally still scheduled with their parents' hearings in Texas, even 5 while they are detained in ORR custody in California. DHS has not been initiating a 6 change of venue or change of address based on the location of their detention in ORR 7 custody for all MPP-unaccompanied children the way they have for other 8 unaccompanied children. Not only does this failure on the part of DHS prevent MPP-9 unaccompanied children from accessing their rights and protections under the 10 TVPRA, it has also led to some MPP-unaccompanied children being ordered 11 removed in absentia because they were in government custody in California during 12 their scheduled MPP hearing in Texas.

13       26. Denial of Opportunity to Apply for Asylum. Another issue of concern is 14 that DHS's policies are denying MPP-unaccompanied children their right to have 15 their asylum applications adjudicated by USCIS. The TVPRA gives USCIS initial 16 jurisdiction over asylum applications filed by all unaccompanied children. As a 17 former asylum officer and immigration attorney focused on unaccompanied children 18 representation, my understanding has always been that a prior removal order would 19 not bar an unaccompanied child from seeking TVPRA-asylum before USCIS. This 20 is consistent with ImmDef's experience prior to MPP. For example, before MPP, 21 ImmDef filed an asylum application for a child who had already been ordered 22 removed by an immigration judge and USCIS still accepted jurisdiction and 23 adjudicated his application.

24       27. However, we have faced several challenges in helping our MPP-25 unaccompanied child clients assert their right to seek asylum before USCIS. First, 26 DHS's indication that they will remove unaccompanied children with MPP removal 27 orders unless a motion to reopen or appeal is filed means that our MPP-28 unaccompanied child clients will be deported before they can even file asylum

1 applications with USCIS. Second, ImmDef's limited resources have been diverted 2 from developing our MPP-unaccompanied child clients' asylum claims to preparing 3 BIA appeals and motions to remand on the child's MPP case. Third, at least one of 4 our clients had her application rejected by USCIS because "a decision had already 5 been made," referring to her MPP removal order.

6 IV. MPP-Unaccompanied Children Require Emergency and Time-7 Consuming Services Not Required by Other Unaccompanied Children

8 28. Beginning with the initial screenings and continuing throughout our 9 entire representation, MPP-unaccompanied children require significantly more 10 resources and more urgent attention than other unaccompanied children ImmDef 11 serves.

12 29. DYEP Screenings. When our team realized that we were starting to see 13 a new population of unaccompanied children that had previously been in MPP 14 proceedings (MPP-unaccompanied children), we realized that our existing 15 procedures made it likely that we had encountered other MPP-unaccompanied 16 children but failed to identify them through our legal screening process. But because 17 it became increasingly clear that DHS was not affording these MPP-unaccompanied 18 children the protections to which they were entitled under the TVPRA, it was 19 imperative to identify these children so that we could take the necessary steps to 20 defend their rights and interests and to advocate on their behalf. Thus, our DYEP 21 team, under the leadership of Directing Attorney Mickey Donovan-Kaloust, had to 22 adjust our screenings and our case management system to make sure we were asking 23 questions that would elicit the information needed to determine if each child had been 24 in MPP and record that information in our case management systems.

25 30. Simply figuring out that a child was in MPP can be a difficult process.
26 More than half of the MPP-unaccompanied children we have encountered have been 27 "tender aged," or ages 12 and under. Thus, many of the children we have served have 28 been very confused about their immigration procedural history and unable to

1 articulate that they were in MPP. After reviewing multiple NTAs for children who 2 were previously in MPP, we noticed certain patterns that allowed us to distinguish 3 MPP-unaccompanied children cases. For instance, if a child's address on her NTA 4 is blank or is an address in Mexico, it likely indicates the child was in MPP. Or if an 5 NTA was issued several weeks or months prior to the child's admission to ORR 6 custody, it is likely because they were in MPP, because the TVPRA requires DHS to 7 transfer UC to ORR custody within 72 hours of apprehension. But these techniques 8 are not foolproof and take away from time our shelter staff should be using to address 9 the pressing needs of unaccompanied minors with no MPP history.

10       31. Urgent Representation. Once we figure out that a child has been in 11 MPP, we must act quickly to determine the posture of the case and what types of 12 advocacy are necessary. ImmDef staff prioritize MPP-unaccompanied children cases 13 over other unaccompanied children cases because they need to be triaged quickly to 14 avoid in absentia removal orders or the execution of existing MPP removal orders.
15 This additional and urgent work for MPP-unaccompanied children cases increases 16 the workloads of DYEP program associates and coordinators, legal assistants, 17 paralegals, staff attorneys, and all of their supervisors. ImmDef's staff have gone to 18 great lengths to try to prevent the execution of in absentia removal orders issued 19 against our MPP-unaccompanied children clients, some of whom have ongoing MPP 20 proceedings in other jurisdictions, by filing motions to sever and change venue or by 21 appearing telephonically.

22       32. Burden of Outreach Regarding MPP Proceedings. ImmDef staff face 23 considerable hurdles in communicating with courts and the DHS Office of the 24 Principal Legal Advisor (OPLA) outside of our jurisdiction—circumstances that are 25 unique to representing children with ongoing MPP proceedings. For instance, for 26 MPP-unaccompanied children whose proceedings were ongoing before the MPP 27 immigration courts in Texas, we need to investigate how to appear telephonically in 28 case a motion to change venue wasn't granted, what motions need to be filed, how to

1 file by mail to courts in Texas, and how to communicate with and serve ICE when 2 several Texas courts are served by OPLA in San Antonio but use different email and 3 mailing addresses. This information is not always accessible online and requires 4 considerable time spent reaching out to practitioners in Texas or accessing 5 information that is not available to the public. For practically every child that 6 required our representation before an MPP court, ImmDef staff had to embark on this 7 burdensome discovery of the procedures specific to that child's MPP tent court.

8 33. In addition to contacting OPLA, we must repeatedly reach out to both 9 EOIR and DHS to understand the status and posture of MPP-unaccompanied 10 children's MPP removal proceedings. Because we cannot review the EOIR record 11 of proceedings in person (because staff cannot travel to MPP courts), our only 12 practical resort is to send emails and make phone calls to the MPP immigration court 13 and to OPLA. We request courtesy copies of any filings and ask whether pleadings 14 have been taken, a change of address or change venue has already been filed, and in 15 some cases try to determine the basis of an MPP removal order. Often it takes several 16 attempts before we obtain any information, which is often incomplete, leaving us 17 guessing as to our MPP-unaccompanied child client's procedural history.

18 34. Burden of Outreach to Family in MPP. Especially for tender-aged 19 children who are unable to articulate their reasons for coming to the U.S. or their 20 procedural history, we must rely heavily on statements from adult family members 21 to determine the child's eligibility for relief and procedural history. This means that 22 ImmDef staff must go to great lengths to get in touch with parents who are stuck at 23 the southern border while their MPP proceedings are ongoing. DYEP team members, 24 paralegals, and attorneys have also spent a significant amount of time contacting 25 family members of MPP-unaccompanied children to consult with them regarding our 26 MPP-unaccompanied children clients' cases, to assess whether motions to reopen or 27 appeals are necessary, and to determine the impact a motion to sever may have. In 28 most cases, speaking directly to a child's parent is the only timely way to find out the 1 history of the MPP proceedings, but it has proven to be challenging to manage the 2 logistics of speaking to migrants who are still in transit to the U.S. Most have 3 unstable housing, unreliable phone numbers, and extremely limited or no access to 4 the internet. By contrast, the process of contacting the families or parents of typical 5 unaccompanied children clients is much less burdensome for several key reasons.

6 First, those children's parents tend to be living in the United States or a child's home 7 country and therefore have stable living arrangements and methods of contact as 8 opposed to the dire circumstances faced by individuals forced to remain in Mexico 9 under MPP. Second, in typical cases, there is considerably less urgency because 10 unaccompanied children without ties to MPP are not at risk of immediate removal, 11 or their release from ORR custody to reunify with a sponsor is not being delayed.
12 Third, other unaccompanied children are not subjected to ongoing immigration 13 proceedings dating from their prior immigration history before the DHS has 14 determined them to be unaccompanied children.

15       35. Increased Need to Enter Appearances. For unaccompanied children 16 without ties to MPP, ImmDef will only provide support with court preparation and 17 assist as "Friend of the Court" for those children who are unlikely to remain within 18 the jurisdiction of the Los Angeles Immigration Court. By contrast, ImmDef has 19 been forced to represent a significant number of MPP-unaccompanied children whom 20 it would not otherwise spend the resources to represent due to the high risk of 21 immediate removal of children with MPP removal orders and delays in their release 22 to Flores sponsors. As a result, ImmDef attorneys have entered appearances and 23 initiated representation for MPP-unaccompanied children clients who were not going 24 to remain in the local ORR LTFC program and were going to reunify in other parts 25 of the country—diverting precious resources we would not otherwise expend.
26 ImmDef had to enter our appearances for at least fourteen MPP-unaccompanied 27 children that our team would not have represented otherwise in order to protect the 28 child from removal. We expended resources by having to temporarily enter

1 appearance and thereafter, withdraw our appearance once the child moved away from 2 our service area. These cases do not include the thirty-two current MPP-3 unaccompanied children clients described in paragraph 18.

4       36. Burden of BIA Appeals. ImmDef has represented four clients who were 5 issued removal orders by MPP judges who denied their parents' asylum applications 6 before the BIA. The BIA processed these cases on the "detained" docket and issued 7 expedited brief schedules, even though all 4 children had been released from ORR 8 custody to sponsors or family members. This expedited processing put a significant 9 burden on ImmDef staff in part due to the difficulties we have had obtaining 10 information regarding MPP-unaccompanied children's procedural history. Notably, 11 one of these cases was for a child who reunified with a sponsor in Texas. ImmDef 12 continues to represent this child in his appeal, even though under normal 13 circumstances we would not have initiated representation of a child that was 14 reunifying outside of our service area. Our CRP team rarely, if ever, has had to take 15 on this type of representation before the BIA. We have also never previously 16 represented unaccompanied children outside of the Ninth Circuit.

17       37. ImmDef identified one unaccompanied child's MPP ties during intake 18 on January 23, 2020, and later learned his brief on appeal was due July 6, 2020.
19 ImmDef entered its appearance before the BIA, but we did not timely receive the 20 record of proceedings, the order of removal, or a transcript of the hearing. The BIA 21 likewise did not respond to our requests for production of the record below or a 22 briefing extension, so ImmDef had no option but to set aside most all other cases and 23 devote more than sixty hours over only six days to preserve the child's rights on 24 appeal and defend against his MPP removal order. We were even forced to draft 25 some of our arguments without having seen the basis of the immigration court's 26 removal order. We separately had to prepare a 133-page motion to remand to argue 27 for our client's rights under the TVPRA.

28       38. Burden of Filings Motions to Reopen MPP Proceedings. ImmDef

1 attorneys have been forced to file several motions to reopen proceedings after MPP-
2 UC were removed in absentia by MPP judges. One of the children was in ORR 3 custody at the time of the removal order. Had the government followed their usual 4 procedures of notifying EOIR of the child's change in custody, this child would not 5 have received the in absentia removal order and we would not have had to divert time 6 usually spent developing the child's applications for relief on filing a Motion to 7 Reopen. In our practice, ImmDef has never before had to file Motions to Reopen 8 cases based on the government's failure to recognize the child was in their custody 9 outside of the jurisdiction of their proceedings. The other children missed their MPP 10 hearings with their parents, so filing Motions to Reopen required contacting parents 11 to gather evidence of the reasons they could not attend.

12 V. ImmDef's Organizational Resources Are Being Diverted to Meet the 13 Urgent Needs of MPP-Unaccompanied Children

14 39. As Legal Services Director managing CRP, I have overseen the 15 significant diversion of our funding, staffing, and time to serve MPP-unaccompanied 16 children who are being denied access to rights that other unaccompanied children 17 receive and to which they are entitled.

18 40. For example, one of my responsibilities is assigning new cases to my 19 team of attorneys. Although generally supervisors are not included in the rotation for 20 case assignments, due to the urgent nature and complexity of representing MPP-21 unaccompanied children, I have had to assign some of these cases to Managing 22 Attorneys or the Directing Attorney, and I have taken some on myself.

23 41. I also facilitate a weekly meeting for the CRP team during which we 24 field questions from the entire legal team and provide technical assistance and 25 guidance. As the number of MPP-unaccompanied child cases increased, I found 26 myself fielding attorneys' questions and anxieties around the tenuous procedural 27 posture of their clients' MPP proceedings in these weekly meetings, in individual 28 conversations, and in supervisory meetings. In order to be able to instruct my staff

1 on how to respond to these issues, I have spent a significant amount of time reading 2 policy announcements, reviewing litigation updates, and reaching out to attorneys to 3 learn about the status of MPP hearings and DHS practices, and managing them 4 accordingly.

5 42. Despite my additional research and communications to my team, I found 6 that we still needed additional support in understanding and combating the complex 7 challenges facing MPP-unaccompanied children. Thus, in September 2020, ImmDef
8 hired El Paso-based attorney Taylor Levy to train ImmDef staff regarding MPP 9 procedures, Title 42, and other DHS policies and practices impacting unaccompanied 10 children and other migrants along the southern border. I assessed my team's training 11 needs and then worked with her to ensure that this training addressed the MPP-12 unaccompanied-children-specific questions from our team.

13 43. These efforts to meet the unique needs of MPP-unaccompanied children 14 have diverted staff time from preparing applications for asylum, SIJS (through 15 guardianships, parentage, and custody proceedings and I-360 filings), and other 16 forms of relief for MPP-unaccompanied children and our other unaccompanied child 17 clients.

18 44. This diversion of our time and resources has also prevented us from 19 moving forward on other projects. For example, before we started seeing MPP-20 unaccompanied children, I was preparing to work with our litigation and advocacy 21 team to address a systemic problem that harms many of our unaccompanied child 22 clients relating to delayed processing of SIJS applications.<sup>1</sup> To begin to address this 23 issue, during the summer of 2019, I put together a list of cases with I-360s pending

24 <sup>1</sup> The TVPRA mandates that USCIS adjudicate SIJS applications within 180 days.
25 Nevertheless, USCIS is taking as long as a year and a half, and sometimes longer, to 26 adjudicate the I-360 petitions for SIJS classification. Not only is this a direct 27 violation of the INA and regulations, it can be the difference between adult ICE 28 detention and unaccompanied refugee minor ("URM") continued housing and care.
Without an I-360 approval, children detained in ORR custody who are turning 18 cannot qualify for URM placement—which constitutes a release from immigration custody—and instead can be transferred to adult detention centers.

1 for more than 180 days in preparation for a possible mandamus action. The list 2 contained approximately 100 clients that could benefit from such an action.
3 However, due to ImmDef's need to prioritize and focus on the crisis affecting MPP-4 unaccompanied children, we did not have the capacity to continue that work.
5 Although many of our clients would benefit from a potential mandamus action 6 regarding delays in processing their SIJS I-360 applications, it is unclear when 7 ImmDef's litigation team will have capacity to prepare those filings and how many 8 of our clients are being harmed in the meantime.

9 45. There have also been several recent policy changes that have negatively 10 impacted our ImmDef clients—such as relating to obtaining government-issued 11 identification—but which we have not had the capacity to challenge due to our need 12 to focus our limited resources on serving clients impacted by MPP.

13 VI. ImmDef's Organizational Resources Will Continue to Be Diverted to 14 Meet the Urgent Needs of MPP-Unaccompanied Children

15 46. Now that Title 42 can no longer be applied to expel unaccompanied 16 children at the southern border, and the Biden Administration is winding down MPP, 17 ImmDef has seen a rise in the number of children—some of them MPP-18 unaccompanied children—arriving in our local ORR shelters, including the 19 Emergency Intake Sites (EIS) we are serving. I expect we will continue to face the 20 same challenges that we faced with MPP-unaccompanied child cases from 2019 and 21 early 2020. Consequently, I anticipate that ImmDef will continue to divert time and 22 resources to serve the unique needs of MPP-unaccompanied children, and thus will 23 not have capacity to provide the same service for all of our unaccompanied child 24 clients, or to prioritize issues other systemic issues impacting many of our vulnerable 25 clients.
